Q195 ASTM Carbon Steel Plate 3mm Thickness 1000 * 2000 mm Size Black Color Hot-Rolled

Product Description

Carbon steel is an alloy of iron and carbon, often with other elements in small percentages that affect the properties of the final product. A few of the most common grades of steel plates and sheets are: A36 - a low carbon steel with good strength, formability that can be securely welded with a minimum yield strength of 36,000 PSI. Carbon steels are alloys of iron and carbon-containing between 0.1% and 1.5% of carbon. In addition to carbon, it also contains the following materials either as residual elements from the process or by design. The residual elements affect the properties of carbon steel, as described below. Silicon comes as an impurity from the ore. Carbon steel plate can be divided into low carbon, medium carbon and high carbon according to the carbon content; According to the use can be divided into tools, structure, cutting structure steel; According to the deoxygenation way can be divided into boiling steel, semi-sedation steel, sedation steel, special sedation steel; According to the way of smelting, it can be divided into converter steel, open hearth steel and electric hearth steel. The material of carbon steel plate is a kind of carbon content less than 2.11%, and not deliberately mixed with metal elements of steel, in addition to carbon also contains a small amount of sulfur, silicon, phosphorus, manganese and other elements.
