Product Description

GB 50mm Thickness 201 Stainless Steel Sheet No.1 Finish Hot Rolled 1500*6000mm For Decoration

Product Description

The characteristics of hot rolled steel: hot rolling metal plasticity is high, low deformation resistance, greatly reducing the energy consumption of metal deformation. Hot rolling can improve the machining properties of metals and alloys, that is, the coarse grains in casting state are broken, the cracks are healed significantly, the casting defects are reduced or eliminated, the as-cast microstructure is transformed into deformed microstructure, and the machining properties of alloys are improved. Hot rolled steel processing requirements: hot rolled steel easy rolling, rolling efficiency is high, hot rolling temperature including opening rolling temperature and final rolling temperature, opening rolling temperature is mainly determined according to the alloy phase diagram of solid phase line temperature about 80%, and the final rolling temperature to determine according to the plastic diagram of alloy to determine, the general requirements of control in alloy recrystallization temperature above. Hot rolling mainly uses slab as raw material. After heating, steel is produced by roughing mill and finishing mill. The hot rolled strip steel from the finishing mill is cooled to the set temperature by laminar flow, from the coiler to the strip roll, after cooling to the strip roll, according to the requirements of the user through different finishing line processing, into steel plate, flat roll and longitudinal strip products.
