Product Description

Q195b Carbon Steel Sheet 20mm Thickness MS Plate SUS 1219*2438mm For Construction

Product Description

Carbon steel refers to iron-carbon alloy with carbon content of less than 1.35%, which also contains impurities such as silicon, manganese, phosphorus, sulfur and other trace residual elements within limited limits. Carbon steel is the earliest used in modern industry, the largest amount of basic materials, the world's industrial countries, in the effort to increase the production of low alloy high strength steel and alloy steel at the same time, but also pay great attention to improving the quality of carbon steel, expand the variety and scope of use. Especially since the 1950s, new technologies such as oxygen converter steelmaking, external injection, continuous casting steel and continuous rolling have been widely used, which further improve the quality of carbon steel and expand the scope of use. At present, the proportion of carbon steel output in the total output of steel in various countries is maintained at about 80%. It is not only widely used in construction, Bridges, railways, vehicles, ships and various machinery manufacturing industries, but also in modern petrochemical industry, Marine development and other aspects, it is also used in large quantities. Carbon steel sheet is often used for general fabrication purposes, especially when corrosion is not a concern or if there will be a coating process following fabrication to protect the steel from the elements. It can be used for anything from car bodies to store signs.
