Product Description

316L Stainless Steel 8K Sheets Mirror Plates 1219 * 2438 Mm Size ASME 0.6mm Thickness

Product Description

316L stainless steel has a maximum carbon content of 0.03 and can be used in applications where post-welding annealing is not possible and where maximum corrosion resistance is required. Since 316L stainless steel features better carbide precipitation resistance than 316 stainless steel, 316L can be continuously exposed to the temperature of 427°C - 857°C (800°F - 1575°F), where 316 is not advisable to. Though 316L features better corrosion resistance than 316, but its mechanical properties are not as good as 316.
